XPO Logistics, of Greenwich, is going through a growth spurt, buying freight transportation and logistics company Pacer International in a cash-and-stock deal valued at about $335 million.

Pacer shareholders will receive $6 in cash and $3 of XPO stock for each share they own. The offer is about an 8 percent premium over Pacer's closing price on Friday, the last trading day before the sale was announced.

The combined company will serve about 12,000 customers and provide a broader range of services, according to XPO Chairman and CEO Bradley Jacobs, who was a driving force in the emergence of United Rentals and United Waste Systems.

Pacer, with 30 locations and 950 employees, brings XPO a key new ingredient in rail services.

It is the third-largest provider of intermodal transportation services in North America — the movement of freight combining rail and other transport modes — and is the largest provider of intermodal services in the fast-growing cross-border Mexico market.

The deal will make XPO the largest provider of intermodal services in the cross-border Mexico market, according to Jacobs, who said few of the Pacer employees would be affected.

'Huge play'

"They are not a bloated company. This was driven by revenue generation," he said, adding that his goal is to make XPO a $5 billion company by 2017. "Our plan is to do three or four acquisitions a year."

Noting that Jacobs participated in 250 acquisitions in building United Rentals, Sam Weisberg, transportation reporter for Mergermarket, a provider of data to the merger and acquisitions community, said Jacobs claims to have 100 more potential acquisitions in XPO's pipeline.

“They (XPO) want to be the freight-forwarding champion. This is a huge intermodal play for them. Pacer handles a lot of ship, truck and train delivery,” Weisberg said. “He (Jacobs) is a very fast-track growth guy.”

Jacobs has had a lot of experience in the intricate task of merging businesses, including logistics, infrastructure and personnel.

“You need to go in with a humble attitude,” Jacobs said. “You don’t go in with guns blazing. The first thing is to listen and unleash the power of the employees.”

No. 4 freight broker

Since Jacobs invested $150 million in XPO two years ago, it has become the fourth-largest freight brokerage in North America and the largest provider of last-mile logistics for large packages, while its stock has quadrupled.

The capabilities and customer bases of XPO and Pacer are highly complementary, according to Pacer CEO Daniel Avramovich. He and most all of the company’s other executives have agreed to continue to run the operations of the newly created XPO division in Dublin, Ohio, where Pacer operates. Avramovich, a 36-year transportation industry veteran, will become CEO of a new XPO unit.

“After a comprehensive exploration of strategic alternatives, we are confident that a combination with XPO maximizes value for Pacer shareholders,” Avramovich said in prepared comments.

Pacer’s board unanimously approved the transaction, which will double XPO’s annual revenue to $2 billion.

Jacobs, majority owner of XPO, said that the acquisition is expected to immediately add to XPO’s earnings.

The deal is expected to close in the second quarter. It still needs approval from Pacer shareholders.

“The deal is another significant step forward in XPO’s growth strategy, doubling its annual revenue run-rate to $2 billion and further strengthening its position in the fast-growing logistics industry,” Jacobs said.

Shares of XPO traded on the New York Stock Exchange lost $1.32 on Tuesday, closing at $28.99. Pacer, traded on the Nasdaq under the ticker symbol “PACR,” lost 5 cents to $8.94.
